Libertarianism Without Inequality
This page intentionally left blank
For Jerry:

teacher, mentor, comrade, friend
Acknowledgements

Chapter 1 is a substantially revised and expanded version of the following article: Michael Otsuka, ‘Self-Ownership and Equality: A Lockean Reconciliation’, Philosophy and Public Affairs, 27/1 (winter 1998): 65–92. Copyright 1998, and reprinted in revised form with permission of, Princeton University Press. The version published here differs from the original article in the following respects: The main thesis regarding the reconciliation of self-ownership and equality, as stated in the introductory remarks and in Section IV, has been reformulated. In Section III I offer a revised formulation and an expanded defence and elaboration of the egalitarian version of the Lockean proviso. In Section V I now offer a proviso-based argument against bequests and argue for the compatibility of self-ownership with the strict egalitarian regulation of the non-market transfer and sharing of resources among members of the same generation. The other sections have been revised to only a minor degree.

Chapters 5–7 consist entirely of previously unpublished material.

In addition to those whom I thank in the originally published versions of the above articles, I would like to acknowledge the following debts: Revised versions of Chapter 1 were presented at King's College, Cambridge, and Yale University. Versions of Chapters 5–6 were presented at the Law and Philosophy Discussion Group in Los Angeles, the University of Exeter, University College London, the University of Liverpool, the London Political Theory Workshop, All Souls College, Oxford, the University of Sheffield, the University Torcuato Di Tella, and the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. Versions of Chapter 7 were presented at University College London, the University of Bristol, All Souls College, Oxford, the University of Manchester, the London School of Economics, New York University, the University of Warwick, the University of Wisconsin-Madison, and Oberlin College. I thank those who provided helpful comments on these occasions. I would also like to thank John Roemer for his generous written commentary on a revised version of Chapter 1; Alan Carter, John Davidson, Cécile Fabre, Alon Harel, Barbara Herman, Eduardo Rivera López, Véronique Munoz-Dardé, Glen Shadbolt, Seana Shiffrin, Andrew Williams, and Jonathan Wolff for their written comments on versions of Chapters 5–6; John Davidson, Ronald Dworkin, Cécile Fabre, and Alon Harel for their written comments on versions of Chapter 7; and A. John Simmons and Peter Vallentyne for their comments on the manuscript as a whole. In the Spring Term of 2002 I presented Chapters 1 and 5–6 in a seminar at University College London. I would like to thank the participants in this seminar: Miriam Cohen-Christofidis, Brian Feltham, Ben Joicey, Véronique Munoz-Dardé, Thomas Porter, Alex Voorhoeve, and Jonathan Wolff. I am indebted to Brian Feltham for creating the index and Ross Ford for reviewing the page proofs. I thank the Arts and Humanities Research Board for providing me with extended leave during the 2001/2 academic year in order to complete this book, and Peter Momtchiloff at Oxford University Press for being such an encouraging and accommodating editor. I am especially grateful to G. A. Cohen for setting me down the path to this book sixteen years ago, for his guidance along the way, and for his characteristically brilliant and incisive commentary on the penultimate draft.

M. O.

London

February 2003
Contents

Introduction
PART I. SELF-OWNERSHIP AND WORLD-OWNERSHIP
1. Self-Ownership and Equality
2. Making the Unjust Provide for the Disabled
PART II. PUNISHMENT AND SELF-DEFENCE
3. The Right to Punish
4. Killing the Innocent in Self-Defence
PART III. POLITICAL SOCIETY
5. Political Society as a Voluntary Association
6. Left-Libertarianism Versus Liberal Egalitarianism
7. The Problem of Intergenerational Sovereignty

Bibliography

Index